Burial of Three of the Victims of the Santa Yasabel Massacre.

El Paso Texas Jan. 14.—The bodies of three of the victims of the massacrhe near Santa Yasabel were buried hera today without any demenstration on the part of Americans whose threats of reprisals against Mexicans led to the establishment last night of a strong military patrol and for a time threatened serious consequences. Those whose obsequies were held today were thomas Evans M. B. Romero and J. H. Woon.

The only cause for serious anxiety here today on the part of the military and municipal authorities was the possible fate of a party of Americans enroute from Chihuahua City and the vicinity of the massacre of last Monday. This anxiety however was dispelled tonight when a special train arrived bearing fifty-two American coal Products International Nick-el, Corn Froducts and U. S. The morning of March 2 found the combatants and the host of seconds, camp followers and admirers at the place of meeting. At 8 o'clock the principals went on the scales, Edwards lifting the bar to 120 1-2 pounds, while Collyer topped 123. As a matter of fact, this was a killing poundage for him, a point that was foreseen by Edwards, and would have been given more consideration by Collyer but for his intense desire to get the Englishman between ropes. man between ropes.

Collyer's right eye retired for the day, and Edwards crashed him two on the neck that rocked him. Blinded by blood and wild with rage, Sam attempted to close. Edwards' straight lefts and rights held him off. It was the turning point of the fight, a battle that was to end Collyer's career in the ring as a pugilist of the first rank. In this round Collyer's lower jaw was broken, but aside from himself and his seconds, none about the ring were aware of it, although it was evident something was wrong with him. The agony because of this injury that Collyer underwent must have been something frightful, but he was sheer grit and a fighter all the way through, and the battle went on for 42 rounds. There are many in the present day ring who are ready to shrick and minutes.

Edwards Stope Collyer.

In the 42d round the end came. Edwards whipped right to the jaw and left to temple, and Sam Collyer, third of the American lightweight champions, went down and out, losing his title for keeps along with his stake. He was carried from the ring a wreck and it was 30 minutes before he was

In the meantime the fane, and among In the meantime the fans, and among them his late admirers, cleared out, leaving the injured man and fallen idol alone on the island, with the exception of his faithful trainer, John Oddy. So sudden is the shift from fame to misfortune; so fickle the throng that cringes, smirks and smiles about the throne of popularity.

Collyer on his return to Baltimore issued a letter in which he praised Billy Edwards and admitted that the New Yorker had won fairly and squarely. Attached to the letter was a challenge, but Edwards refused to give it serious attention, and was sustained by the public. About this time Barney Aaron, the ex-champion, also chal-

SCHEDULE FOR YALE

TRACK MEN IS OUT Shows the Athletes Have Been Entered in Nine Events for Season.

Yale's track dates for the season have been announced, showing the knights of the cinder path entered in a total of nine events before the short season closes May 27. Aside from the list published Yale will have a spring meet for the track team and will hold an interscholastic contest for the preparatory school athletes of the east, making a total of eleven events for the season. The schedule follows: Indoor: January 26, Millrose meet, New York city; February 5, Boston Athletic association meet, Boston; 12, Georgetown meet, Washington; 21, Hartford A. Mahan is slated for the big leagues, if he cares to take the jump and there is only one other field of endeavor that has the same attraction with him as professional basehall. That is football coaching. Will Be Free Agent,

When he gets his degree at Harvard in June, Mahan will be a free agent, unshackled of all amateur restrictions and the like. He may then choose to do as he wishes in the way of earning a yearly wage. Bacause of the close association of Percy D. Haughton and Mahan, it is likely that the football star will give his former coach the prior right to claim him as an employe, if Haughton wishes to.

Mahan has one more season of college baseball to go through before he will have finished his athletic work at Harvard. Next month he will answer will have finished his athletic work at Harvard. Next month he will answer the preliminary call for battery candidates for the varsity ball team, and report for work each day. As a result of his steady work in the pitcher's box last year, Mahan is slated to be one of Harvard's pitching mainstays during the coming season. To preserve his amateur status, however, Eddle must hold aloof from all binding contracts, and so there is no chance of his signing up with the Braves or any other major league ball club until late next June, when the last of the Yale-Harvard baseball games has been played.

"First, I make it a point to hit the ball hard," she says. "I then try to hit the ball to the part of the court hardest for my opponent to reach, and thirdly, I always keep my

The Binghamton club of the New York State league is after surplus players of the Chicago Cubs and has already put in a bid for several. Manager Joe Tinker of the new Cubs says the only reason he decided to let Cy Williams go ics that he is a lefthanded hitter and in the tam he has picked there are more batters from that side of the plate than in good for a lineup. There are several clubs apparently willing to drop right-handed hitters to make room for Will-

good in the Cards' outleld.
